

Mr Kyle Hill

Science Communicator,
United States of America

Biography

Mr Kyle Hill is a science communicator based in Los Angeles, known for using pop culture to make science engaging and accessible. He holds degrees in civil engineering and science communication from Marquette University. Kyle has written for Wired, Popular Science, and Slate, and appeared as an expert on outlets like BBC, Fox News, and Al Jazeera America.

He hosted MythBusters: The Search on Science Channel and created the hit YouTube series Because Science, which has earned over 100 million views by exploring the science behind fandoms. Kyle regularly speaks at schools and conventions to inspire the next generation in STEM.