Ms Celeste Saulo

Secretary-General

World Meteorological Organization

Professor Celeste Saulo, a meteorologist from Argentina, is the first woman and the first Latin American to serve as Secretary-General of the World Meteorological Organization (WMO). She previously led Argentina's National Meteorological Service and has authored more than 60 scientific publications, while contributing to international research initiatives. Elected WMO Secretary-General in 2023, she is recognized as a champion of equity and collaboration in meteorology. Her achievements have been honoured with awards, including the Konex Award and honorary membership of the American Meteorological Society.
